

Leading Risk Management Provider Alcumus Appoints Senior Tech Executive as CEO North America

TORONTO, ON - OCTOBER 13, 2020: Alcumus, the UK's leading provider of risk management solutions, has appointed Tyler Davey as Chief Executive Officer of its North America operations.

Alcumus supports both UK and International clients, many of whom are on the FTSE 100 index, with a wide range of software-led risk management solutions. In North America, Alcumus has a well-established presence through its eCompliance and ContractorCheck subsidiaries based in Toronto, serving over 400 client companies in Canada and the US.

"I have a huge amount of respect for what Adrian has achieved in founding and growing eCompliance, driven by his personal mission of eliminating one million workplace incidents," says Alyn Franklin, CEO, Alcumus. "I'd like to thank him for his significant contribution and personal commitment. He has been a valued member of the Alcumus team, and he leaves with our thanks and best wishes for his future. I'm delighted that Tyler is joining us as we move into the next stage of our development. His track record speaks for itself, with an exceptional background and outstanding, high-profile reputation in the technology industry, spanning 20 years as a driving force in senior roles."

Tyler brings extensive experience to his new role, with a strong understanding of the enormous impact technology can have in improving and transforming workplace practices and business outcomes. He has years of executive leadership across both technology (delivery, technology, and architecture) and business (sales, marketing and strategy). He has led multiple teams across North America and internationally, helping to drive consistent high growth each year for the past 12 years. He has managed and implemented strategies and solutions for both startups and fortune 500 customers, most recently with global brands Amazon Web Services and Microsoft.

"I'm excited to join a global leader and be able to help grow and develop Alcumus for its future success in the North American market," says Tyler Davey, CEO Alcumus, North America. "The impact we have on people's lives is enormous and is one of the major reasons why I've joined the business. It's a humbling experience to be given the opportunity and ability to help save lives, prevent injuries, and change how everyone sees workplace safety."

In his role as Chief Executive Officer, Tyler will lead Alcumus North America into its next phase of growth, developing the brand in the North American market, managing eCompliance and ContractorCheck and driving the business through organic and further acquisition opportunities.

“I’m very proud to welcome Tyler, who will help to develop and grow Alcumus for the future,” says Adrian Bartha, President, Alcumus North America. “Our journey with eCompliance started with a desire to use technology for good, and the human impact we make is as hugely rewarding. It’s been a privilege to work with such an amazing team and I’m very proud of all that we’ve achieved together.”

Founded in 2012 by safety-tech entrepreneur Adrian Bartha, eCompliance is a leading SaaS cloud solution, protecting front-line workforce in hazardous industries. The company has grown from strength to strength under Adrian’s leadership and as it closes in on reaching its initial mission to eliminate one million workplace incidents by the end of 2020, will enter a new phase of development and the leadership will transition to the new Alcumus CEO North America. Adrian Bartha is concluding his mandate at the end of October 2020 and will remain involved with the company in an advisory capacity until the end of the year.

ContractorCheck, the most recent addition to Alcumus following an acquisition in July 2020, is a health and safety compliance company which provides contractor assessment and accreditation to legislative and client requirements, enabling clients to access a contractor management tool to maintain compliance and reduce risk.
