

New engineering appointment signals continuing focus by Alcumus on risk management in North America

TORONTO, ON – July 19, 2021 – Alcumus, a leading technology-led risk management software provider, demonstrates its intent to make the most of recent successes in North America with the appointment of Gabriel Tracey, who joins as Senior Vice President of Engineering today, July 19.

Gabriel, who has extensive tech leadership experience with some of Canada’s largest companies, including Innovapost and Canadian Tire, will be reporting to Chief Technology Officer, Rhys David, and will be working closely with the North America leadership team.

He will be responsible for Engineering and Technology in North America, making sure these areas align with the wider Alcumus global strategy. Gabriel will be focused on getting the right people, process, and technology in place, keeping Alcumus at the forefront of the rapidly expanding risk market. This new position will increase the ability of the global team to make a positive impact in the North American market and continue to deliver solutions focused on creating better workplaces to keep people safe.

“Alcumus is committed to providing our customers with highly relevant and effective risk management solutions,” says Rhys David, Chief Technology Officer, Alcumus. “We passionately believe the appointment of Gabriel will enable us to deliver this even more effectively. He has a vast amount of experience having held senior leadership roles in prominent organizations both in Canada and in his native Ireland. We were immediately struck by his vision, determination and focus on people. This appointment highlights our desire to invest in the best talent and follow an ambitious agenda, even in uncertain times.”

“I can’t wait to get started at Alcumus,” says Gabriel Tracey, Senior Vice President of Engineering, Alcumus in North America. “With their ambitious plans, this is an exciting time to join the team. Recent times have highlighted what a vital role technology plays in modern life. We have a huge opportunity to make a significant difference to our customers and cement our position as a leader and innovator in the field of risk management.”
